SUBJECT: KURDISTAN NATIONAL ASSEMBLY SPEAKER ADNAN MUFTI ON MONEY AND RELIGION

Classified By: Political Counselor Margaret Scobey for reasons 1.4 (b) and (d).

11. (U) This is a PRT Erbil cable.

12. (C) SUMMARY: Adnan Mufti , Speaker of the Kurdistan Regional Government's (KRG) Kurdistan National Assembly (KNA), discussed the new investment law and relations with Iran and Iraq's Council of Representatives (COR) during a meeting with Erbil IPAO at the KNA October 18, 2006.
END SUMMARY

-----
Iran and the Shia - Arab and Kurdish
-----

13. (C) Discussing the religious parties in the KRG, Mufti said the Kurdistan Islamic Union (KIU), previously in the KRG coalition, had withdrawn before the second election while the Kurdistan Islamic Group (KIG) reconsidered its separate stand and joined for this term. He said the KIU and KIG have similar views, but that KIG has close ties with Iran. Mufti said 95 percent of Kurds support the U.S. fully, while 5 percent still oppose American policy because of hostile political and religious affiliations. (Note: Mufti, from the east of the KRG, has experience of Ansar al-Islam's fundamentalist control in sections of Sulaimaniya.)

14. (C) While most Kurds in the KRG are Sunni Muslim, Fayli (Shia) Kurds live in central and southern Iraq. Although they voted with Shia parties, Mufti stated they are more interested in Kurdish than Iraqi or Shia issues.
When questioned, Mufti said Fayli Kurds in Europe are very close to KRG, but those in rest of Iraq side with the Shia parties to avoid political and social isolation. In addition, Fayli Kurds lost Baghdad property under Saddam and believe the Shia government will restore their rights. (COMMENT: Fayli leaders in Baghdad and Sulaimaniya stressed to IPAO during previous discussions the lack of KRG support for Fayli Kurds. Fayli leaders stated that PUK and KDP leaders do not support Shia Kurds below the Green Line because they lack the 'Peshmerga experience'. END COMMENT)

Relations with the COR

15. (C) Mufti commented that the KNA is interested in coordinating with the Iraqi Council of Representatives (COR), but COR is dealing with internal problems. COR Speaker Mahmud al-Mashadani visited Erbil and discussed with Mufti the need for coordination and good relations between the two bodies. They both thought this coordination would resolve issues on central versus regional laws and the constitution. Mufti added that because of the problems in Baghdad, the COR has 'forgotten us for now - and this may be good for us!'

16. (C) Mufti spoke extensively on the KRG Investment Law, in which he retains a strong interest as the former KRG Minister of Finance. He stated that the KRG has no limit on foreign investment, but the Iraqi investment law sets conditions on foreign investment in order to maintain an Iraqi majority share. When the KRG law was under discussion in the north, he said, there were many who wanted the same provisions - KRG holdings to be at least 51 percent, limitations on property ownership - but he convinced them that the KRG needs to be in line with globalization. Mufti remarked that the greatest difficulty is moving away from the deeply-rooted socialist economic model.

17. (C) His approach, Mufti said, was to explain that capital has no borders and its movement cannot be controlled. Even Kurdish millionaires, he commented, keep funds outside the KRG. On the question of property, Mufti referred to Kurdish complaints that foreigners would 'take over' and quoted Margaret Thatcher that such investment brings money into the region, but cannot later take the property out. Mufti believed the law is good, and contended that KRG courts will enforce contracts in case of dispute. He acknowledged that international investors will need time to develop confidence in the system.

18. (C) COMMENT: Mufti was welcoming and confident, clearly comfortable in his role as PUK Speaker of the KNA in Erbil. His reputation as an unpretentious person has entered popular culture in the KRG - cell phones with bells and whistles are called 'Mam Jalal' (for Jalal Talabani) or 'Kak Massoud' (for Massoud Barzani), depending on their shape. The 'Adnan Mufti', on the other hand, is the bare-bones model without flashy extras. Mufti's tenure as Minister of Finance in Sulaimaniya, his long service in the PUK Politburo and as PUK representative in Erbil (during which he was seriously injured in the bombing of PUK headquarters in February 2004), make him an unlikely leader in the KDP dominated city of Erbil. However, as Deputy Speaker Kamal Kirkuki (KDP) stated later that day, KNA members are avoiding referring to past conflicts in an effort to work together.
